
ICYMI: McCrory fights to keep electricity prices low, protect private property rights

Monday, May 9, 2016

Governor Pat McCrory has become a national leader in fighting the Obama administration's federal overreach, most recently stopping the federal takeover of the state's electricity system and millions of acres of private property. Secretary Donald van der Vaart explains in the North State Journal why decisions about how to protect the environment should be made in North Carolina, not Washington,

DC: <http://www.nsjonline.com/article/2016/05/mccrory-fights-to-keep-electric...>

This post is related to:

Environmentally Speaking

About the Blog

Find DEQ's views on national and state-level environmental issues and updates on important issues as they happen.

Categories

Follow Us

Blog Feed \(RSS\) \(/blogs/feed\)

How can we make this page better for you?

