Ms. Sturgis,

Thank you for reaching out to the John William Pope Foundation with your email inquiry. Below, please find the Pope Foundation's comment. If you questions regarding this matter, please contact me directly.

"The Pope Foundation gives to a wide-ranging group of nonprofits. However, the Pope Foundation does not direct the activities of its grant recipients. And in particular, the Pope Foundation has never acted as editor of grant recipient content. In fact, our grant recipients often hold diverse views. For example, regarding climate change, the American Enterprise Institute (Link 1, Link 2), Property and Environment Research Center (Link 3), Cato Institute (Link 4), and Reason (Link 5) offer a spectrum of ideas on the subject, many believing climate change needs a public policy response. As a grantor, we encourage a spirit of intellectual curiosity and open debate, and we hope other grantors do as well."
